Some food products may contain harmful bacteria that can cause illness in you or your pet if the product is not handled correctly. Protect yourself and your pet by following these steps to keeping food safe:

Clean: Wash hands before and after working with food, and especially after handling raw foods. Wash cutting boards, countertops and utensils with soap and hot water after they have come in contact with raw meat, poultry, fish, seafood, or eggs.

Separate: Keep raw foods away from foods that are ready to eat.

Cook: Cook foods thoroughly. Reaching 165 degrees F as measured with a food thermometer will eliminate bacteria.

Chill: Keep meats, poultry, fish, seafood, and eggs refrigerated at 40 degrees F or colder. Thaw frozen meats and other ingredients in the refrigerator.
